Bill Strathmann joins Network for Good as CEO

Network for Good is very pleased to announce the addition of Bill Strathmann as Chief Executive Officer. Mr. Strathmann joins Network for Good today.

Mr. Strathmann comes to Network for Good from BearingPoint, where he provided strategic planning and business improvement consulting to corporations and non-profit organizations. From 1995 to 2002, Mr. Strathmann developed and led a consulting practice at Andersen Business Consulting, serving national nonprofits, including the United Way, National Geographic Society, and the Nature Conservancy. In addition, he serves as a board member of the Anacostia Watershed Society.

The move comes after another strong year for Network for Good, in which it delivered $17.5 million to more than 8,500 charities. In partnership with VolunterMatch and the USA Freedom Corps Volunteer Network, Network for Good also referred nearly 60,000 volunteers to nonprofits.

“The board is excited about the role Bill will play in helping Network for Good capitalize on the success of its first two years” said Network for Good board member, Murray Gaylord, Vice President of Brand Marketing at Yahoo! “The current team has done a remarkable job of maximizing results with limited resources. We are confident that Bill will continue to strengthen Network for Good’s position in the sector and lead the organization to its next phase.”

Mr. Strathmann will report to the Network for Good board of directors and will work closely with senior staff, including President Ken Weber, Chief Operating Officer Kimberly Sweet Sasscer, and VP of Nonprofit Programs, Kate Grant. The entire team looks forward to working with Bill.

“We need to add talent and bandwidth to grow,” said Weber. “Network for Good has been successful in demonstrating its model and has tremendous opportunity ahead. We welcome Bill and know he will make an outstanding contribution.”
